Support music education
in your community and nation

Get Knowledgeable! – Title IV Part A

The Every Student Succeeds Act offers many opportunities to support a sequential, comprehensive music education in our nation's schools through:

- Specific and stand-alone mention of music as an important component of a well-rounded education
- New and expanded funding opportunities to support access to music education

Visit bit.ly/EverythingESSA for more information.

Take Action! – Advocate for Your School's Music Program

Become an advocate at the state and local level through the Civic Action Field Guide: bit.ly/NAfMECivicActionFieldGuide

- Know an administrator or lawmaker? Invite school board members, county/district supervisors, state and national lawmakers to a school music performance.
- Increase involvement in school music programs by sponsoring school music clubs or talent shows to generate interest and enthusiasm among students not currently enrolled in music classes.
- Work with teachers and administrators to get involved in Title IV Part A planning for your school district. These funds can support a well-rounded education, including music.

To learn about how you can advocate for Title IV Part A funds to be used in your school's music program.

Visit bit.ly/TitleIVAToolkit for a Title IV, Part A Toolkit for ideas.

Soloist Bio: Eshaan Giri

Eshaan has been playing cello for about 10 years; he studies with Tim Strang at the Omaha Conservatory of Music. Besides cello, Eshaan also enjoys singing, playing the piano, and writing his own music. He has been a part of the Nebraska All-State Orchestra for all of his years of high school, and played cello in the All-National Orchestra his senior year. Eshaan will be attending Yale University in the fall, hoping to double major in Data Science and Music. Aside from teaching himself any instrument he can get his hands on and annoying his friends with his melodica, Eshaan is also a co-captain of the school Science Olympiad team, the President of the school's Math Honor Society and Chess Club, and a member of quite a few other clubs. In his spare time, Eshaan enjoys Star Wars, superhero movies, and comic books.
